A NEW WILDE PLAY.

American theatre-goers are to have an opportunity of witnessing a production of the late Oscar Wilde's unpublished drama, "A Florentine Tragedy." Lena Ashwell, the distinguished English actress, is to play it in this country on her forthcoming tour, in conjunction with "The Shulamite." Those who have been privileged to read the work pronounce it one of the most striking things that its author ever did.

Perhaps the most interesting feature about the play is the curious story of its disappearance from the author's study soon after it was originally completed, and of how, five years afterward, another draft was discovered by Wilde's literary executor, and by him pieced together for use upon the stage. As the author of such books and plays as "The Picture of Dorian Grey," "A Woman of No Importance," "Lady Windermere's Fan" and "The Importance of Being Earnest," Wilde won for himself a position which he held for years, and which proclaimed him to be a genius in the world of letters of the nineteenth century.

After his downfall, while in jail, he wrote the strangely dramatic and sincere explanation of his conduct and beliefs—"De Profundis"—in which he exclaimed: "If I can produce only one beautiful work of art I shall be able to rob malice of its venom and cowardice of its sneer, and to pluck out the tongue of scorn by the roots."

He—"I think modern dress reveals the vanity of the human heart." She—"Oh, I never saw one so décolleté as that."—London Tartar.

have met with the approval of the public immediately.

Of course the public has had experience with the Held Engraving and the art department of the
